ABSTRACT

The present invention is directed to a cellular phone communication device comprised of a radio frequency module configured to receive and send communication data. A codec controller is provided, coupled to the radio frequency module and configured to identify data portions related to an executable codec file. A codec engine is coupled to the codec controller, configured to store an executable codec file received by the communication device and identified by the codec controller.